No distractions

Avoiding risks

Driving to the conditions

Building experience

Summary: Get two groups together for this lunchtime activity. Mark out a small court dividing the teams from one another and give each team a bucket of water balloons. Ask one team a question from the road code – if they answer it correctly they get to fire a water balloon at the opposition. If they get in wrong, the other team gets a chance to answer.

Current Available Resources: The AA Road Code and website is a great place to find relevant questions and answers.

The SADD website also has information and links to help you come up with some interesting and relevant questions.

Notes:

Consider where you are going hold the event. A high traffic area at school where lots of people will see it play out will work well.

Use Facebook and school notices to promote the activity and to recruit teams. You could even consider having students go up against teachers!
